Gout flare-ups can be debilitating, disfiguring and distressingly painful.[2] And they recur. But now the management of gout is clearer.[1-3]
Studies with urate-lowering therapy show that keeping serum uric acid below 6.0 mg/dL (360 µmol/L) enables key therapeutic goals to be met.[2,4,5] Existing crystals are dissolved,[2] small tophi may disappear,[2] the formation of new crystals is prevented and, in many cases, flare-ups can be avoided altogether.[2,4,5]

So the EULAR (European League Against Rheumatism) gout task force recommends the use of urate-lowering therapy in patients experiencing recurrent attacks and recommends that their uric acid level is kept below 6.0 mg/dL (360 µmol/L).[1]

PRESCRIBING INFORMATION. XENICAL (orlistat). Indications: XENICAL is indicated in conjunction with a mildly hypocaloric diet for the treatment of obese patients with a BMI ≥30 kg/m², or BMI ≥28 kg/m² with associated risk factors. Treatment should be discontinued after 12 weeks if patients have been unable to lose ≥5% of their body weight. Dosage and administration: One capsule immediately before, during or up to one hour after meals (only 30% of calorie intake from fat). Contra-indications: Chronic malabsorption syndrome, cholestasis, breast-feeding, known hypersensitivity to any component of the product. Precautions: Monitor anti-diabetic drug treatment. Co-administration of orlistat with ciclosporin is not recommended. Treatment may potentially impair the absorption of fat-soluble vitamins (A, D, E, and K), patients should be advised to have a diet rich in fruit and vegetables. The possibility of experiencing gastrointestinal events may increase when orlistat is taken with a diet high in fat. Caution should be exercised when prescribing to pregnant women. Studies have shown no interaction between orlistat and oral contraceptives, however an additional contraceptive method is recommended to prevent possible failure of oral contraception that could occur in case of severe diarrhoea. Rare cases of rectal bleeding, generally of mild intensity have been reported and prescribers should investigate further if symptoms are severe or persistent. Drug Interactions: A decrease in ciclosporin levels has been observed in an interaction study. Co-administration with acarbose should be avoided. INR values should be monitored if patient is on warfarin or other anticoagulants. Reinforcement of clinical and ECG monitoring is warranted if patient is on amiodarone. Side-effects: Please consult the Summary of Product Characteristics for full details of adverse events. Common: Influenza, anxiety, headache, respiratory infection, urinary tract infection, menstrual irregularity, fatigue and gastrointestinal such as oily spotting, abdominal pain, increased defecation and flatulence. Treatment adverse events in type 2 diabetics included hypoglycaemia and abdominal distension. The incidence of adverse events decreased with prolonged use of orlistat. Serious: Very rare cases of increases in liver transaminases and alkaline phosphatase and also cases of hepatitis. Very rare cases of bullous eruptions, diverticulitis and cholelithiasis. Rare hypersensitivity reactions of angioedema, bronchospasm and anaphylaxis. Legal Category: POM. Presentation and Basic NHS Cost: Xenical 120mg (84 capsules) £33.58. Marketing Authorisation Number: EU/1/98/071/003 (84 capsule blister pack). Marketing Authorisation Holder: Roche Registration Limited, 6 Falcon Way, Shire Park, Welwyn Garden City, AL7 1TW, UK. Further information is available on request. Xenical is a registered trade mark. Date of preparation: June 2007.
